Make a crisscross cut on the top of each chestnut. Cook in boiling water until shells burst and chestnuts are soft. Drain, cool, and remove shells. Force through a food mill. Blend in the sugar, salt, and ginger; fold in the whipped cream. Pack into a greased bowl or mold, and then carefully turn out. Garnish with additional whipped cream, the kumquats, orange slices, and nuts.

A New Year's celebration wouldn't be complete without Peking Dust as a sweet treat. This here is one of Chinese desserts that are traditionally served during the New Year season, and it is a fun recipe featuring symbolic Chinese foods.
