Preheat oven to 350°. Grease an 8-inch square baking pan. Sift the flour, salt, baking powder, 3/4 cup granulated sugar and 2 tablespoons cocoa into a bowl. Mix in the milk and vanilla until smooth. Stir in the melted butter and nuts lightly. Spread evenly in the prepared pan. In a saucepan mix the brown sugar, water, remaining granulated sugar and cocoa. Bring to a boil, stirring until sugars dissolve. Pour over the batter in the pan. Bake 40 minutes, or until a cake tester comes out clean. Cool on a cake rack 20 minutes, then turn out, bottom up. The fudge will now be on top. Cool and cut into 2-inch squares.

For a lighter cake, separate the eggs and add just the yolks to the butter mixture first. Then whip the egg whites separately using clean beaters until they form soft peaks, and then fold them into your cake batter.
